ANNEX 1: GENDER EQUALITY POLICY

Introduction

Sri Lanka was one of the first countries in Asia to grant voting rights to women. It elected the world's first female Prime Minister, Sirimavo Bandaranaike, in 1960. Sri Lanka also elected the country's first female President, Chandrika Bandaranaike Kumaratunga, in 1994. However, Sri Lanka ranks among the lowest in South Asia for female representation in politics. More female leaders are needed in public office at the national and local level to encourage greater gender equality.

The Constitution of Sri Lanka considers men and women equal citizens. Article 12 stipulates that all persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law. No citizen should be discriminated against on the grounds of race, religion, language, caste, gender, political opinion, or place of birth.

Women form approximately 57% of Sri Lanka's 21 million people. Yet women only constitute 33.4% of the 8.5 million, economically active population. Gender-based discrimination and gender-based stereotypes still exist contributing to poverty and injustice.

Universal free education has benefited females by closing the literacy gap between men and women. However, females still do not have the same status, power, access to and control over resources as males. Women are seen as 'supplementary workers' and offered employment that is considered

'women's work' especially in some regions.

While women's education and employment options have improved, women are not provided with equal opportunities in leadership roles. Most women migrant workers are domestic laborer. The Agricultural and Garment sectors employ more female workers but few in management positions.

The lack of women in leadership positions is known as the 'sticky floor syndrome'. There are no quotas in place for the recruitment of women to private or public sectors, politics or parliament.

COVID 19 has been detrimental to the progress of gender equality for women and girls who are paying the price socially and economically. The pandemic has led to increased domestic violence; the loss of employment for women in insecure, informal and lower-paying jobs; and an increase in unpaid care work that girls and women mostly already provide.

Sri Lankan Government policy makers, corporate business and society are all needed to challenge the current status, shift mindsets and pave the way to gender parity.

1. Purpose

Gender equity means eliminating gender-based discrimination and gender stereotypes in all areas of life. Not only is gender equality a basic human right for women and girls and therefore its own goal, but empowering females will increase Sri Lanka's economic growth and development for everyone's benefit.

This policy ensures E Zone Technologies (Pvt) Ltd consistently adheres to gender equality principles and practices across our organization and provides a framework for accountability. These principles also impact the type of projects E Zone Technologies (Pvt) Ltd select as well as how programs are implemented in the community.

2. Scope

The general principles of gender equality apply to all E Zone Technologies (Pvt) Ltd employees, Members of the Board, volunteers (national and international), donors, partners, consultants/contractors, interns and visitors to E Zone Technologies (Pvt) Ltd.'s office, programs and project activities.
